Legacy of The Lost Warrior

Season - 1

Author : Suvidya .R. Sonawane

LEGACY OF THE LOST WARRIOR

HORROR • DETECTIVE • SUSPENSE • MYSTERY

A DARK SECRET.
A FORGOTTEN LECACY.
A TERRIFYING TRUTH.

PUBLISHED WORLDWIDE
IN 150+ COUNTRIES

AVAILABLE IN
EBOOK & PAPERBACK

SCAN TO PURCHASE
YOUR COPY

Copyright © 2025 by Suvidya Sonawane All rights reserved.

No part of this book may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means—electronic, mechanical,
photocopying, recording, or otherwise—without the prior written permission of the author.

This is a work of fiction. Names, characters, places, and incidents are the product of the author's imagination or are used fictitiously. Any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead, is purely coincidental.

Cover Design: Suvidya Sonawane Editing:
Suvidya Sonawane Publisher: Self-Published

EVERY FAMILY HAS A SECRET.
HIS...
COULD DESTROY
AN ENTIRE UNIVERSE.
LEGACY OF THE
LOST WARRIOR
SEASON 1

Table of Contents

1. Boring but Important Introduction	2
2. The Last Day	4
3. Confusion is Everywhere	32
4. The Solution Lies within the Confusion	38
5. Zian Decision	45
6. Whispers of the Magic Key	54
7. Zian and Hanae	62
8. Investigation of Curses	65
9. The Fractured Choice	76

Chapter 1

The Boring but Important Introduction

Hello, my friend. You are holding this book in your hands, maybe because of its unique title, “Legacy of the Lost Warrior.” The title itself might have confused you a little — and if that’s true, then congratulations to me! My first attempt to catch the reader’s attention has worked.

My name is Suvidya. I am 21 years old, and this is my very first book. Every character and every part of this story has been created by me, and I hope you enjoy it. This book is filled with excitement, adventure, suspense, and a touch of romantic storytelling. I’ve tried my best to cover all the thrilling elements I love. You can think of this book as a novel, or even as a series similar to an anime. I hope you enjoy this first part.

Aaaaand… before I bore you and waste your valuable time, I’ll keep this introduction as short as possible. Before you begin, there’s one thing you should know: I have written this story in a way where even small events have meaning. Everything is connected, and nothing happens without a purpose. So it’s important that you read the story in order. I’ve hidden many clues—even inside the title itself.

I will explain the meaning of the title, but you won't fully understand it unless you read the entire story.

Now, let's understand the title:
"Legacy of the Lost Warrior."

Legacy:

This word refers to what someone leaves behind—their impact, their story, their responsibilities, their possessions, or even their bloodline. In this story, the legacy of the original warrior will influence future events and characters.

The Lost Warrior:

This represents a figure who has been separated from their people, their purpose, or even their identity. They may be mysterious, forgotten, or a once-great hero who has fallen into obscurity.

All the deeper meanings behind the title may not be clear yet, but trust me — by the end of the series, you will understand everything.

Chapter 2

The Last Day

You must be thinking, “Why does the second chapter start with the last day?”
Well, get ready—because this is where one of the craziest adventure journeys begins!

It was a sunny day with a beautiful view of the city. In the middle of that busy city stood a lovely house filled with a warm and loving family. This is the home of our hero, Zian Nakamura—the eldest son. His younger brother, Kaito, is two years younger, but the bond between them is unbreakable. Their love for each other is unconditional.

Zian’s mother is a homemaker—well-educated, kind, and gentle. When Zian and Kaito were young, they spent most of their time playing games. They were good at almost every game, but their grades in school were extremely low.

Zian, however, had a unique gift. He was incredibly good at problem-solving. At the age of seven, he started playing chess and went on to win four national championships in a row. He could solve almost any puzzle or cube problem. At one point, he became so bored of solving cubes normally that he started solving them with his eyes closed.

At first, Zian's parents believed he was a genius. But his academic grades told a different story. Even at the age of twelve, neither Zian nor Kaito could write properly in English. Their father, Mr. Hiro Nakamura, was the respected principal of their school, but because of his responsibilities, he never found enough time to focus on his children's studies.

And then came the most important person in Zian's life—Miss Hana Sato, the principal of Zian's school. She loved him like her own son. She never married and was the childhood best friend of Zian's mother, Miss Mina Nakamura. Zian's father also knew her since childhood, and the three of them shared a strong bond of friendship.

Because of Miss Hana's efforts, both brothers eventually improved in their studies. But Zian had one unusual problem. If he didn't take a mint leaf along with a special type of juice within 24 hours, he would suffer severe pain throughout his entire body.

That was the story of Zian's childhood—
and now, I'm sorry if it bored you a little…

Because from this moment on, the real story begins.

Tomorrow was a very special day for Zian. He had finally completed his higher studies—he was officially a graduate now. His college was hosting the farewell function, and the principal, Miss Hana Sato, was the one handling everything. She cared for Zian deeply, almost like a mother. To Zian, she was not just a second mother but also his best friend. He shared everything with her.

But Zian was extra excited because tomorrow wasn't special for just one reason—there were two important events in his life.

First, his farewell.
And second, Miss Hana had promised to tell him a very special secret.

That night, Zian's college friends came over to his house. They had decided to spend the entire night together. Zian's closest friends—Kai, Akari, and Hanae —were all there. Their group was famous as "WeFour." They had been inseparable since childhood.

Zian had a treehouse in his garden, and all four friends gathered there. They were happy, excited, and also a little emotional because none of them knew when they would meet again after tomorrow.

The whole group congratulated Hanae—she was the topper of their batch since childhood and had also received the highest placement package from their college.

Akari sighed and said, “Yaar, I’m getting bored now. Let’s play something.”

But Kai shook his head. “No… today we need to talk.” For the past month, all of them had been busy with placements and interviews. Tonight was the first time they were all free. Everyone had been placed—except Zian. He didn’t know what he wanted to do in life, so he had dropped the idea of giving interviews.

They all sat on the wooden floor of the treehouse. Kai had a huge crush on Akari since childhood but was always too scared to tell her. Zian knew this, and he had actually planned this entire treehouse gathering so Kai could finally confess his feelings. Zian even forced Kai to sit beside Akari.

Suddenly, Hanae turned to Zian.
“Why did you skip the interviews? You’re good in studies.”

Akari nodded. “Yes, Zian. Why didn’t you even try?”

Everyone except Kai waited for the answer—Kai was too nervous, preparing to propose.

Zian took a deep breath and smiled. “I did not skip because I was afraid. I skipped because I have a different vision for my life.”

Hanae and Akari exchanged curious looks.

Zian continued, “I observe people a lot. I read many books about careers, jobs, and life. And I realized something… 90% of people fall into the same rat race. Only 10% achieve their smart goals. Most people start their life with a job. They work, they get bored, but they stay—and in the end they receive just a small piece of cheese… their salary.”

The three listened quietly.

“But once you take responsibility for your family,” Zian said, “you can’t take risks. You can’t learn new things easily. Your innovation dies slowly. This”—he tapped his chest—“this age is the time to dream big. To understand our potential. To use our high energy in the right direction.”

“Job is like a big piece of cheese,” Zian said with a smile. “But why should I settle for cheese when I can build an entire cheese factory of my own?”

Hanae raised an eyebrow. “Zian, you’re from a rich background. Not like us. We have to work. If you think jobs aren’t good, imagine paying your own bills and then trying to ‘do something special’.”

Zian nodded calmly. “I knew you would say that. That’s why I’ve already prepared. My entire software for my startup is ready. I’ve saved the money to pay all my bills. Even the advertising cost. I planned this from my first year of college. I learned programming languages and started freelancing from second year.”

Hanae's eyes widened.
For the first time, she realized Zian wasn't just a spoiled rich kid. He was a long-term thinker. A visionary. Smart and determined. His plan genuinely impressed her.

Meanwhile, Kai wasn't listening at all. His heart was pounding too fast. Suddenly he stood up and shouted,

"STOP EVERYTHING! I need to say something!"

Everyone went silent.
Zian smiled knowingly—he understood Kai better than anyone.

Kai turned to Akari, his voice trembling but loud. "Akari… from childhood I've had a crush on you. For many years I was too scared to tell you. But today… I want to say it. I love you. I want you to be a part of my entire life."

And then—
Kai blinked twice in confusion.

He realized… he had said all of that only in his imagination.
He was still staring at Akari silently, dreaming with his eyes open.

Zian was shocked. Why is Kai still not confessing to Akari?
He kept waiting, but Kai simply sat there silently. The group slowly drifted into a conversation about their childhood—how they had once enjoyed every moment together, and how life had suddenly pushed them onto different paths. Because of jobs and responsibilities, no one knew when they would meet again in the future.

Seeing everyone getting emotional, Zian spoke softly, "There's nothing to be sad about. We enjoyed our childhood together… we laughed, we played. And now, we will enjoy the rest of our lives in our own ways. We should be happy to discover new things and improve our knowledge."

His words surprised all three of them.
Zian had always been a special child—quiet but deep. His thoughts were more mature than most students their age.

Hanae looked at him curiously. "Zian, how do you think so maturely at your age? What is the secret behind this mindset? I used to think you were the most confused child… but today, I feel like you're the clearest among us."

Zian chuckled. "Aaaa… you think I'm clear about my future? Then you're wrong. I've simply started to 'go with the flow.' I want to learn new things, increase my knowledge, and explore the world. That is my dream." He paused.

“Many times, I see dreams… and inside those dreams, I see another world. A hidden universe. It feels like that universe calls me.” For the first time, everyone saw confusion on Zian’s face. It was clear—Zian carried many unanswered questions within himself.

Akari leaned closer. “But why are you so confused? Your parents are rich, well-settled, educated… you have everything. So what is missing?”

Zian sighed. “Everything around me is perfect—my parents, relatives, friends. I got the best of everything since childhood. But still… sometimes this feeling comes. A feeling that I’m different. That I need to know myself more. Since 12th grade, I started reading a lot of books, trying to understand people’s problems.”

Kai groaned dramatically. “Ohhh yaar, stop this! We all know Zian is a visionary. He wants perfection in everything he does. And if he develops interest in a field, he masters it.”

Zian smiled faintly. “Still… every skill I learn, every bit of knowledge I collect… I always feel it is incomplete.”

Akari suddenly stood up. “I’m getting bored! And this discussion is becoming too deep. Let’s go out for a night walk.”

Everyone agreed instantly.
But Zian whispered, “We’ll have to go from the back door. No one should know we left the house at 1 a.m.

They sneaked out through the back door. “Where should we go?” Kai asked.
Hanae grinned. “Let’s go to the place where we first met.”

Everyone’s eyes lit up.
It felt amazing—going back to their school after so many years. Their school was just a few minutes away. As they entered the campus, Zian smiled. “Nothing has changed… only the colours and paintings. The structure is the same.” Hanae laughed. “Kai, do you remember crying here? You were beaten by the seniors’ gang and they took all your chocolates.”

Akari added, “Yes! And I gave you my handkerchief that day. You were crying right on that bench.”

Kai scratched his head shyly. “I was just a kid back then…”

Akari smiled. “All our childhood memories are coming back. No wonder we became such close friends.”
Hanae nudged Zian. “Do you remember how you joined our gang?”

Akari nodded. “Zian was the silent boy in our class. Always quiet, always staring at the ground with the sports teacher.”
Zian laughed. “Yes… and we actually met on 24 January, 2007, during the interschool chess competition.”

Hanae's jaw dropped. "You even remember the date?! I thought you forgot!"
"How can I forget?" Zian replied softly. "That day was special. I found a true friend—someone who stood with me without knowing my background."

They all hugged tightly.
Akari suddenly shouted, "Kai! You still haven't returned my handkerchief! I gave it to you in school and you kept giving excuses for years!"

Kai panicked—but then he gathered courage and said, "We always sat together on that bench. Our friendship started there. And Akari… this is your handkerchief. I've kept it with me since 2007. I never confessed because I was scared I'd lose our friendship. But now… I want to say… I love—"

Zian snapped his fingers. "Kai. What happened?" Kai blinked.
Another imagination.
Nothing had actually happened.

Zian groaned. "He will never confess in real life."
They moved to the seminar hall stage and talked about childhood memories. Suddenly Zian said, "Look everyone, I want to tell you something."
Kai panicked. "Don't do it!"

Hanae giggled. "Tell us! It must be something interesting about Kai."
Zian simply said, "Akari… Kai has loved you since childhood."

Silence Shock.
Kai slowly took out the old handkerchief with trembling hands.
Akari slapped him lightly. “Idiot! Why didn’t you tell me earlier?!
And now you’re telling me only because Zian exposed you!”

She hugged him tightly.
Zian and Hanae exchanged a smile—they stepped aside to give them privacy.
“Let’s check the underground classroom,” Hanae whispered.
“You two continue your confession phase.”

Zian and Hanae walked down to the old underground classroom—
A mistake that would change everything. Because someone else was in that school.
Someone who had been watching them from the shadows.

As Zian and Hanae reached the underground room, Zian suddenly stopped. “Let’s go back. I feel something bad is happening. And…
I forgot to take my medicine.”
Hanae froze. She knew how important Zian’s medicine was.
Before they could leave, the door slammed shut from outside.

They were shocked.“How did this happen?” Hanae whispered.
“Maybe the air pushed it,” Zian tried to convince himself.

They tried calling Kai and Akari—but there was no network underground. They knocked loudly, shouting for help, but no sound reached outside.
Meanwhile, upstairs, Kai said, “They’re taking too long. Let’s go check.”
But before going, Akari said she needed to use the washroom. Kai followed her jokingly. “I always wanted to see the girls’ washroom. Childhood dream!”
Akari glared at him. “Seriously, Kai? These are your childhood thoughts?!”
She went inside while Kai waited outside, near the water filter.

Suddenly — A black shadow moved behind him.
Kai sensed something but brushed it off. “Maybe I’m overthinking.” Then, in one quick strike, the shadow hit his head.

Kai fell unconscious. The shadow dragged him across the corridor... into the school ground. A few minutes later, Akari returned, found Kai missing, and rushed to the underground room. Hearing Zian’s voice, she unlocked the door.

“Where is Kai?!” she asked.
“We don’t know! We were locked inside!” Zian replied. Zian suddenly froze. “Wait… I feel something. A strange energy.”
Akari and Hanae groaned. “Stop joking. We know you and Kai love pranks.”
“No.” Zian’s voice trembled. “Principal ma’am promised me… and I do not break her promises.”

They realized he was serious. They tried calling their parents—no network. Panic rose. Zian whispered, “That energy… it’s pulling me. Follow me.” They rushed to the inner playground and saw Kai lying unconscious at the center. They woke him up. He was confused. “I don’t know anything… how did I get here?” Akari hugged him tightly. “Let’s just go home.” Zian shook his head. “You all go. I want to find where this energy came from. It was very close.”

Everyone was shocked at his sensitivity.
The black shadow sensed this… and slipped away into the darkness.
Instantly, Zian said, “The feeling stopped. It went far away.” They returned to the treehouse, shaken. “What happened to us?” Hanae whispered. “How did Zian sense that energy?”

Zian looked at his hands. “This was the first time I felt something like this. And… strangely, I felt satisfied. As if that energy was telling me something about myself.” He exhaled deeply. “I must find that energy. I need to know what connects me… and it.”

Zian said, “Okay, let’s go to sleep now. Tomorrow is a very important day—our farewell party. And listen, don’t tell anyone what happened today. We’ll forget everything and rest. As they were about to sleep, Zian forgot to take his medicine, but Hanae reminded him, and he finally took it.

Around midnight, Zian had a terrifying dream. He saw someone trying to kill the Principal, Miss Hana Sato. She was one of the closest people in Zian's life. He woke up thinking it was just a normal dream. Feeling thirsty, he reached for the bottle but found it empty. Kai had drunk all the water out of fear earlier. So Zian went to the kitchen to refill the bottle.

While standing near the window, he noticed something shocking—someone was inside Miss Hana Sato's house, just like in his dream. He didn't understand how to react. Was this a coincidence or something more? He could see a shadow moving inside her house. Miss Hana Sato lived alone in that big house, which made it even more frightening.

Zian decided to check, thinking it might be a robber. He quietly stepped out from the back door, crossed into Miss Hana Sato's garden, and used the duplicate key she had given him for emergencies.
Inside the house, everything seemed normal. He found nothing—until suddenly, Miss Hana Sato stepped out of her room. Zian froze in fear as she stared at him.

Her reaction was unexpected. She was extremely angry. "What on earth are you doing here? Why did you enter my house like a thief?" she shouted. Zian knew she was always humble and calm; he had never seen her this furious. She didn't even let him explain.
Overwhelmed and scared, Zian ran out of the house. Outside, he tried to understand why she was so angry. He had visited her home many times before, even late at night, and she had never reacted like this.

Overwhelmed and scared, Zian ran out of the house. Outside, he tried to understand why she was so angry. He had visited her home many times before, even late at night, and she had never reacted like this.

The next morning, everyone got ready for the farewell party. They all agreed not to discuss what had happened the previous night.

But the questions remained:
Who is that black shadow?
Why couldn't Zian sense it this time?
And what connection does it have with Zian and Principal Ma'am?

But the truth was still hidden in the darkness… and the story was just beginning.

They all got ready for their farewell party. Kai dressed like a true gentleman—his girlfriend Akari helped him get ready and even styled his hair. It was their first official day as a couple. Hanae brought a pair of couple rings for them as a congratulatory gift for finding their true love.

Zian also brought flowers for both of them. But along with the flowers, he surprised them with a five-day couple trip to Hawaii. Kai and Akari were completely shocked. Why would he spend so much on them?

Zian laughed and said, "Come on! This is from the first payment of my online business. Let me do this for you."

They took lots of photos together and met everyone at the college.

Hanae received the Best Student Award, the Highest Package Award, and was declared the University Topper of the 2025 batch. Kai received the Best Project Team Leader Award. His software was bought by a big company, and he had even won the hackathon with Akari.

Then Zian's class teacher, Mr. Minho, gave a very emotional five-minute speech. Everyone became teary-eyed. He also highlighted something shocking about Zian: he had been offered the highest package from the best company—but he had rejected it. The whole class was stunned. Zian had never mentioned this.

But his close friends weren't surprised. They knew Zian was a mastermind. He was already building something extraordinary.

Zian really wanted to apologize for what happened last night. He searched everywhere for Principal Miss Hana Sato, but she was nowhere to be found. He asked a few teachers about her, but they said, "We've been trying to reach her since morning. She's not answering her calls. We even went to her house, but she's not responding to anyone."
Just then, Kai called Zian to thank him. "Whatever you did for me today… it's unforgettable," Kai said.
But Zian's mind was somewhere else. He was worried about Principal Ma'am.

He felt something bad had happened. Kai noticed Zian wasn't paying attention. "You're overthinking again. What are you thinking about?"

Zian finally told him everything that had happened at 3 a.m. the previous night. Kai replied, "Zian, it's all in your imagination. You were half-asleep. Relax."

Zian tried to convince himself that Kai was right. After the farewell, they all returned home. At home, Zian asked his mother if she had seen Miss Hana Sato.

His mom said, "No. She didn't answer my calls either. I thought she was busy with the farewell function."
Zian told her she wasn't present at the college. He also told his mother only half the truth—he said he went to her house last night but didn't mention the school incident.

His mom became upset. "Why did you go there at that hour? Maybe she went out of town for work. Don't overthink," she said.

Then she suddenly smiled and asked, "So… are Kai and Akari in a relationship now?" Zian was surprised. "Yes! But how did you know?" "I saw Kai in the morning. He looked too perfect. Boys only dress that nicely when a special girl enters their life," she laughed.

Then she asked, "Do you have a girlfriend?"
Zian replied, "No, Mom. I don't have time for a relationship right now."

She then asked him seriously, “Are you sure about what you want to do in the future? Mr. Minho told me you rejected the highest package from the top company.” Zian said softly, “Mom, you know me from childhood. I think differently. Trust me—I’ll do something better. You’ll be proud of me.”

His mother nodded. She knew Zian was a visionary boy. He always had something big in his mind. Then she said, “Your dad is waiting for you in your room. He wants to talk to you privately.”

Zian understood immediately—his father must have learned about the rejected placement offer.
Zian entered his room. “Dad, may I come in?”

His father said, “Come in. Sit.” Zian sat in front of him. His father asked, “Why did you go to Miss Hana Sato’s house last night? And where were you and your friends going so late?”

Zian’s mind raced. How does Dad know about this? Did he see us? Or did someone tell him? But then he realized—Dad must have installed hidden cameras outside the house.

Zian calmly replied, “We went to school to relive our childhood memories and enjoy our last day. And at around 3 a.m., I went out to drink water and saw someone inside her house.”

Then his father asked an unusual question—something Zian never expected. “Did you feel anything strange inside the school… or at Miss Hana Sato’s house?” Zian hesitated for a moment. “No,” he answered. His father walked out silently.

A moment later, Zian’s mother shouted from downstairs, “Zian! Come have your lunch!”
Zian joined them at the dining table. His father was already seated.

“Welcome, Zian,” his father said with a warm smile. “You’ve finally graduated. I’m proud of you. Your teacher, Mr. Minho, told me everything. I believe in you. You’ll choose your own path.”

Zian was shocked. A moment ago Dad was asking suspicious questions, and now he’s acting completely normal. What’s happening?

He asked, “Dad… how do you know about last night?” His father looked confused. “What are you talking about?”

A huge question mark formed in Zian’s mind. Same person… but a completely different mood? What’s going on?

He thought maybe it was just stress. His father added, “Today is a busy day. Our school chairman is coming for inspection right after lunch.”

Suddenly, Zian's brother Kaito stormed out of his room. He looked extremely angry. But the moment he entered the kitchen, he froze in shock.

"Dad… you're here? Then who was in my room just now? He looked exactly like you! He destroyed my room, took our family album, and removed all the photos of Big Brother Zian and Miss Hana Sato!"

Mr. Hiro frowned. "What are you talking about? I came home straight from school and sat at the dining table. I haven't even been to my room." Zian's mom, Miss Mina, added, "Yes, you came home an hour earlier than usual and told me, 'When Zian comes, send him to my room. I'm waiting for him.'"

Zian nodded. "Yes, Dad… we talked in your room before I came downstairs. You asked me about last night."

His dad stared at him, confused.
"What nonsense are you saying? What happened last night?"

For a moment, everyone fell silent. Zian's expression changed. Something felt wrong—very wrong. He rushed to Kaito's room with his brother. But to his shock, the room was perfectly clean. Everything was in its place—nothing broken, nothing touched. "Brother," Kaito whispered, trembling, "I swear everything was messed up a few minutes ago. Dad searched the room like a police officer. And our family album… look!"

Zian opened the album. Everything looked normal — except two photos were missing. Both were childhood photos of Zian with Miss Hana Sato. A cold chill ran down Zian's spine. "This isn't normal," he said. "Something bad has happened." Both brothers ran to the living room.

"Mom, where's Dad?"
"He was getting late, so he went to the school," she replied.

Zian immediately called Hanae, Kai, and Akari, asking them to come to his house at once. With Kaito and his mother present, Zian explained everything from start to end.

Akari's voice trembled. "This is serious. We should inform the police or our parents. Something is definitely wrong."

Zian shook his head. "No… first we go to Miss Hana Sato's house. Last night, the person I met inside wasn't her. I'm sure of it. She never behaves like that."

The five of them, along with Miss Mina, rushed to Hana Sato's house. They knocked, called out her name — no response.

The fan in her bedroom was spinning.
"That's strange," Zian whispered. "Last night it was off." "Maybe she turned it on later," Mina said. "Let's check inside."

The bedroom door was locked from the inside. “Break it,” Zian said. He pushed the door with full force until it burst open.

And then… Everyone
froze.
Miss Hana Sato was lying motionless on her bed — at 3 PM in the afternoon.

They rushed to her. Zian’s mother checked her pulse. Her face turned pale. “She’s… no more.” Silence swallowed the room.

Police and media soon arrived. Zian stood alone, silent, tears rolling down. Miss Hana wasn’t just a principal to him — she was like family.

The police concluded, “Cause of death: heart attack.” But Zian didn’t say a single word about the events of 3 AM.

When the body was taken for post-mortem, the whole house fell into heavy silence. In Zian’s room, his friends, his brother, and his parents gathered.

Miss Mina whispered, “We need to tell Zian everything. We decided he should know the truth after graduation.”

But now the questions grow darker…

Who was the man in Zian's house — wearing his father's face?

Who did Zian meet at 3 AM in Miss Hana Sato's home?

Why were only the photos of Zian and Miss Hana missing?

And worst of all…
Why has Zian's once-clear life suddenly plunged into mystery, fear, and confusion?

God knows what awaits him next. But one thing is certain—

This is the true beginning of the story.
Now you understand why this series is called: "Legacy of the Lost Warrior."

There were still forty-eight hours left for the post-mortem report of Miss Hana Sato to arrive. The Zian family waited anxiously, because they were the only relatives she had. Her parents had passed away years ago, and since then, she had lived most of her life alone.

The Nakamura family was still in shock. How could a woman like her—disciplined, calm, and perfectly punctual in everything—die of a sudden heart attack? Nothing felt right.

Zian's friends stayed with him constantly. They still could not understand how such a thing could happen. Because of the tragedy, Zian had completely forgotten about the shadow man. Miss Hana Sato was like a mother to him, and losing her broke something inside him.

Inside Zian's parents' room, his mother and father decided it was time to tell him the truth. They believed he was mature enough to understand. When they entered Zian's room, his friends and his younger brother Kaito were already there. For Kaito, the shock was even greater—Miss Hana Sato loved him as if he were her own child. She never treated Zian and Kaito differently.

Suddenly, Zian's parents, Miss Mina and Mr. Hiro Nakamura, knocked on the door. Hanae opened it, and they stepped inside.

Zian looked at them with tired eyes. "Mom, Dad… do you know what Miss Hana Sato wanted to tell me after graduation?"

His mother looked at Mr. Hiro silently for a moment before she answered. "Yes… we know. She really wanted to tell you something important."

Zian felt a small sense of relief. He had been drowning in guilt—guilt that he didn't speak to Miss Hana Sato in her last moments, guilt that he couldn't help her, guilt that maybe… if he had gone back, he could have saved her.

Mr. Hiro took a deep breath. “Zian… listen carefully. I don’t know if this is the right time, but your mother insisted that you must know the truth. You have always asked us about your dreams, your strange feelings, the sense that something in your life is incomplete. And you were right, my son.”

He paused. The room grew completely silent. “Zian… we are not your real parents.”

The moment those words were spoken, everyone in the room froze. Shock spread like a cold wave. How could this be possible? In just two days, their lives had filled with questions—strange incidents, unexpected revelations—and not a single clear answer.

Zian stared at them, confused and heartbroken. “Mom… Dad… what are you saying? If I’m not your son, then who am I? Why did you keep me? Why did you give me so much love? Why… why me?”

Miss Mina stepped forward, her eyes filled with tears. “Oh, dear… don’t ever think that because we are not your real parents, we love you any less. We love you more than anything—even more than our own son, Kaito.”

Zian’s voice trembled. “Then… who am I? Where are my real parents? And… what did Miss Hana Sato want to tell me? Everything is happening so fast. The last forty-eight hours have turned my whole life upside down. I can’t answer a single question about myself anymore.”

Miss Mina wiped her tears and said softly, “I’m sorry, Zian… but you deserve to know the truth. Your real mother… is Miss Hana Sato.”

The room fell into a heavy silence. No one could speak. No one could understand how life could give Zian so many painful revelations one after another.

But Zian—unlike most people—did not break. If it had been anyone else, they might have collapsed or fallen into depression. But Zian was different. After all, he was the hero of this story. He had to be stronger than fate.

He looked at his parents with steady eyes. “Tell me everything. Why did this happen? Why couldn’t she accept me as her son? She was always beside me… then why couldn’t she call me ‘son’ officially? What was the reason behind it?”

Zian asked… and this time, he needed the truth.

Zian asked his parents, “If Miss Hana Sato was my real mother… then who is my real father?”

Mr. Hiro took a deep breath. “Zian, I will tell you everything. To understand the truth, we must go back to the past… before you were born.”

He continued, “In 2002, your mother Mina, your real mother Hana Sato, and I were the best of friends since childhood. Later, Mina and I got married. After our marriage, I got a new job, and we had to shift to the UK. So we left Japan—our hometown—because of work.

“Your real mother, Miss Hana Sato, stayed in Japan to complete her master’s degree. She studied for two years, and during that time, she sent us a letter saying she got married. But Japan was facing many earthquakes then. Because of that, all international flights were cancelled, and we couldn’t attend her wedding.

“Later, she mailed us her wedding photos. But somehow, those photos disappeared from our family album. We didn’t know what happened to them.”

Kaito suddenly said, “Don’t worry! I have a solution. I saved digital copies of all our old photos.”He turned on the projector in Zian’s room.

The moment the images appeared, everyone froze.
Zian looked exactly like the man in the photographs—his real father. From his hair to his height, from his skin tone to his eyes… everything was the same. It felt as if Zian himself was standing in those wedding pictures.

Hanae whispered, “Zian… you are the exact xerox copy of your father.” Zian swallowed hard. “Then tell me more about them. Why didn’t my real mother keep me with her? Why did she hide everything?”

Mr. Hiro nodded sadly. “Zian… we don’t know everything. But we do know one thing—your real mother, Miss Hanae Minamoto, was extremely intelligent and talented. You learned so much from her without even knowing it.”

He continued, “When we returned to Japan after two years, we found Miss Hana Sato pregnant. We kept asking her, ‘Is this your child? Is Zian your son?’ But she always said the same thing: ‘It is for his safety.’

“She never wanted what happened to your father… to happen to you. She used to say it was a very personal secret, something she would reveal only to you. And she warned us—if anyone else ever discovered that secret, they wouldn’t survive.”

Mr. Hiro’s voice grew heavy. “Her parents knew the truth. But they died in an accident right after you were born. Since then, the secret became even more dangerous.

“I believe… now that she is no more, you must search her room. She must have left a clue for you. But remember this, Zian—only you can know the truth. If any of us interfere, or even accidentally discover something about that world she mentioned… that secret universe… we may not survive.”

Zian felt a chill. “A secret universe? Dad… what do you mean?”

Mr. Hiro nodded slowly. “Your real mother told us that your father came from a different universe. She didn’t believe in curses before. But after losing her parents… she realized the marks of the curse were real.”

Chapter 3

Confusion is Everywhere

Everyone in the room was shocked after knowing the truth. Many questions filled Zian's mind—just like yours, dear reader.

But Zian's brother, Kaito, said, "I don't believe this stupid story. We are all educated people, and we will face this together. My big brother Zian, don't worry. I am always with you, even if I have to face death for you."

Zian replied, "Oh brother… the love you have for me is unconditional. Everyone present in this room is important in my life. I lost my real mother, but I don't want to lose any of you. If this hidden universe really exists, and if that curse is real, then I won't let it take anyone from this room."

Zian's friend Kai said, "Brother, I don't believe in curses. It's the 20th century. How can you still believe in such things?"

Zian looked down and said, "Brother, I lost my mom before I even knew her. I lost my grandparents too. But now I finally have a family, and I don't want to lose that."

Zian stood up from his chair and thanked Mr. and Mrs. Nakamura for taking care of him. He was unable to express in words how much he loved them, but his eyes clearly showed unconditional love.

Zian continued, “This is not the time to waste. I need to find the truth behind my birth. Who is my father? Is he still alive? And if he is… then is he in danger? I have to find him.”

Mr. Hiro said, “Oh my son, listen carefully. I don’t want to stop you, but your mother, Miss Hana Sato, knew that if she kept you with her, the curse would try to kill you. That’s why she left you with us. It was the right decision. She wanted you to live a normal life, without ever knowing about this story. She never wanted you to enter that unknown hidden universe. If that universe still exists, my advice is this—do not enter it. Stay away. You have your own life. Live it. You want to be a businessman? Then become one. I am always with you.”

Zian nodded. “Dad, I just need one day. I’m waiting for the forensic report of my mom. After that, I will make my decision. For now, I want to check her room.”

With Kai, Akari, Hanae, and Kaito, Zian went to Miss Hana Sato’s house. But because of police investigation, they weren’t allowed to enter. They had to wait until the investigation was complete.

Akari, Kai, and Kaito said, “It may take a long time. You go home and rest.” Hanae said, “You guys go. I want to talk to Zian alone.”

Zian and Hanae walked to the nearby garden.
Hanae asked softly, “I know everything is confusing in your life right now. Anyone in your place would break emotionally… but you’re holding everything together.”

Zian stared at the sky. “Hanae, just listen. I am confused. Everyone has to die one day, but what happened to my mom is different. I want answers—answers from the universe.”

Hanae said, “You have a beautiful life ahead of you, Zian. Great success is waiting for you. I know you can do anything in this world.” Zian sighed. “Hanae, please stop with the emotional talks. Tell me why we are really here. What do you want to say?”

Hanae looked at him with trembling eyes. “You are emotional from the inside, even if you act tough from the outside. I know you, Zian…”

Zian said, “Hanae, just tell me.”
Realizing emotional words wouldn’t work, Hanae stood straight like a brave woman and said,
“I love you…”

Zian, in a cold expression, replied, “Sorry. I’m not interested.”
It seemed that after learning the truth about his mother, Zian had lost his emotions. He didn’t care about Hanae’s feelings. And instead of a simple sorry, he said something cruel:
“A girl like you doesn’t deserve a boy like me. You’re fat… and not that good-looking.”

Hanae burst into tears and ran away.

Later, Kai and Akari were sitting in a coffee shop when they saw Hanae running and crying. They immediately followed her. She entered her house, crying. Both of them went inside too—Hanae's parents were working, so she spent most of her time alone. That's why she studied a lot, just to escape loneliness. Akari had the extra key to her house.

Akari opened the door and asked gently, "What happened? Did you confess your love to Zian?"

Kai was shocked. "What? You liked Zian? Why didn't you tell me before?"

Akari said, "Shut up, Kai. It's a girl's thing—you'll never understand. You tell your best friend everything just like she tells us about Zian. We all know Zian is tall, good-looking, and handsome. Even our IT teacher once proposed to him. In both school and college, you know how popular he was for his looks. Anyone would have a crush on him. And we also know he's a silent boy who shares only a few things with us."

Kai nodded. "Yes… it's really hard to understand Zian. What is he even thinking? You saw how everyone in the house was emotional, but Zian just looked confused. In his mind, only one thing is running—the forensic report of Miss Hana Sato. Maybe he is disturbed from inside, that's why he spoke to you like that."

Hanae wiped her tears. “Whatever it is… he shouldn’t have spoken to me like that.”
Kai said, “Akari, take care of her. I’m going to talk to Zian.”

Kai went to Zian’s house, but he wasn’t there. He then checked the garden where Hanae and Zian had been talking—still nothing. After thinking for a moment, he opened the location app Zian had installed on all their phones. It was Zian’s own startup idea for girls’ safety, where parents could track their daughter’s location in emergencies.

Kai checked the app and saw Zian’s location—he was at the school.

Kai rushed there on his bike. At school, he found Zian in the meditation room, the place where he always went to calm his mind. Zian was a devoted follower of Buddha. The thoughts and life lessons of Buddha changed many lives—including Kai’s.

Kai had been a disturbed kid, always teased by everyone. But with Zian’s guidance, meditation, and wisdom, he slowly learned to focus and rebuild himself. Every friend in their group was thankful to Zian, because he helped each of them escape mental stress and find their own paths.

Kai quietly sat near Zian without disturbing him. After 30 minutes, Zian opened his eyes and saw Kai sleeping in front of him. He gently woke him up.

“What are you doing here?” Zian asked. Kai stretched. “Oh, you finally woke up.”

Zian rolled his eyes. “Idiot, you are the one who fell asleep in the meditation room.”

Kai laughed. “Yeah, whatever. But tell me—why are you here?”

Zian sighed. “I met Hanae. She was crying because of you.” Zian took a deep breath. “Friend, listen. There is something very important I need to tell you now…”

Kai listened carefully.
After Zian finished speaking, he was shocked. “Zian…
this is a big risk,” Kai said quietly.

Zian stood up. “I have to take this risk. Without it, I will never understand the purpose of my life.”

What did Zian tell Kai? Why did
Kai call it a risk?
This is the suspense, dear reader.
If you want to know the real truth, you must continue reading.
You might feel a little confused now because you’re standing at the border of the story’s midpoint. But as you move deeper, every answer will unfold—and trust me, it’s going to be amazing.
Keep reading, my friend. The story has just started.

Chapter 4

The solution lies within the confusion

After the conversation between Kai and Zian, Zian returned home and fell asleep on his bed. His parents and brother believed he was too depressed and confused by everything happening in his life.
Kai went to Hanae's house and told her,
"Hanae, let him be. I talked to him. He doesn't want anything new in his life right now. He also told me that tomorrow we should all join our jobs and move on."

Tomorrow was the day Kai and Akari were leaving for Tokyo, while Hanae had to go to Fukuoka. Both cities were in opposite directions, far away from their village. None of them knew when they would get the time to meet again.

Akari said, "Get ready. We're leaving tomorrow. For now… goodbye."

Scene shifts to Zian's house :
Later that night, Zian was still asleep. His parents quietly placed food in his room so he could eat when he woke up. During dinner, Kaito and their parents discussed what decision Zian might take. Would he continue his studies and start his business, or choose to search for the hidden universe?

Zian's mother, Miss Mina, said,
"My wish is that Zian focuses on his business after a few months. It will be good for him."
Everyone agreed.

Zian woke up, ate the dinner his mother left, but forgot to take his medicine. After washing his plate, instead of returning to bed, he quietly left the house and walked toward Miss Hana Sato's home. Two police guards were outside, but Zian slipped in through the back door. The house was silent and empty. A strange pressure filled the air—he could already feel the cursed energy.

He had only one goal now:
To meet the shadow man—the one responsible for all of this.

He entered Miss Hana Sato's room. It had already been thoroughly investigated by the police. Zian began searching for her diary. He knew she used to write daily. He checked the drawers, but found nothing. Then he noticed a small table next to the drawer. Inside it was a locked box that required a password.

Zian tried everything—his birthday, her birthday, random patterns, important dates—but nothing worked.
He realized:
Whatever was inside this box must be extremely important. Miss Hana Sato was a brilliant woman; she never did anything without purpose.

After many failed attempts, he decided to search the rest of the room first. While examining the bed, he noticed something strange—the right corner looked slightly larger. He investigated it closely and discovered a hidden drawer underneath.

Inside, he found a key.
At first, he was confused.

The locked box required a password, not a key.
He examined the key carefully. It was long, old, heavy… definitely ancient. More like a historical key than a modern one. "Why would ma'am hide this so carefully?" he wondered. He kept the key with him and continued searching the entire house, room by room. But he didn't find anything else meaningful.
Finally, he decided to check the terrace.

It was a full moon—a night when, according to old beliefs, the power of dark curse energy reaches its peak. As Zian stepped onto the terrace, he felt it instantly—Someone else was there.

He looked around. The terrace was silent, but something felt wrong. Maybe the silence was making his senses too sharp… maybe he was imagining it.

But he wasn't.
Someone was watching him. Zian decided to leave. He walked to the terrace door and tried to open it. The door wouldn't move. It was locked… from the inside.

Zian froze. A wave of fear and alertness washed through his whole body. There was no doubt now. Someone was definitely on the terrace. Taking a deep breath, Zian stepped away from the door and slowly moved to the center of the terrace…

Then, in a firm voice, Zian called out, “I know you’re here. Come in front of me.” This time, the cursed energy he sensed was far stronger—heavy, powerful, almost suffocating. But Zian needed answers.

The energy suddenly appeared behind him, but Zian sensed it and quickly moved aside. When he turned, he finally saw it a black shadow monster with two heads and four arms, like two beings fused into one.

Zian was shocked. The shadow monster spoke in a deep, echoing voice, “So, you can see me?”
“Yes,” Zian replied. “Now tell me your name. Who are you, and why are you here?”

The monster took this as disrespect. “How dare you question me, human? I am the king here. Only I ask the questions!” it roared.

Fear and confusion flashed on Zian’s face, but he steadied himself. He decided to face it. Zian had strong martial arts training, and using his physical strength, he chose to fight the curse. He believed he could defeat it.

The monster growled, “You have the key. I want it.” Zian froze. “How do you know about me?”

“I know everything about you… and your father,” the monster replied. “If you want answers to your life’s questions, give me the key.” “No way,” Zian said firmly. “If you want the key, fight me. Beat me first. I don’t trust you.”

The monster smirked. “Interesting. You are just like your father—not only in your face, but in your courage and your mind.”

“Tell me who I am,” Zian demanded. “And how do you know my parents?”

“You want answers… but this is only the beginning,” the monster said.

“Sometimes, the solution lies within the confusion.” “What does that even mean?” Zian asked.

“Forget it. Let’s fight. I want to see if your fighting skills are as strong as your father’s.”

Zian replied, “I may not know my father… but I’m sure you’ll regret fighting me.”

The monster lashed out with its long tongue, aiming at Zian’s face. But Zian’s reflexes were sharp—he dodged with a smooth counter-movement.

The monster’s eyes widened.
He realized Zian wasn’t a normal human. He was the son of a legendary warrior.

But Zian himself didn't know the monster's strengths or weaknesses. He grabbed a flowerpot and threw it. The monster crushed it easily. Then they clashed in a fast, brutal hand-to-hand fight. With four arms, the monster seemed unbeatable, yet Zian still held his ground. The monster grew confused—How is a beginner fighting this well?

It was even a little impressed.

During the battle, the monster asked, "You're not trained like other sorcerers. How are you defending my attacks?"

"What do you mean?" Zian shot back, blocking another strike. Their conversation continued even as they fought.

"How long can you keep up?" the monster taunted. "Don't worry about me," Zian smirked. "I'm still just playing with you."

The monster laughed darkly. "Then let's raise the level." "I'm always ready," Zian replied.

"For a thousand years, after your father… I haven't met a sorcerer this strong," the monster said.

"How old are you?" Zian mocked. "Time to retire!"

The monster kicked Zian away to create distance.
Zian's speed and flexibility were giving it trouble—it felt like fighting his father all over again.
Even as a beginner, Zian had the potential to surpass his father.

But right now… he was still a lost warrior who needed direction. Zian grew angry. He needed answers to his life answers only the monster had. He charged forward with explosive speed.

The monster dodged and aimed a powerful punch, but it didn't even scratch Zian The monster gasped. "Impossible…"
Zian kept attacking with fast, heavy punches.
The monster growled and transformed into its true form. Its four arms merged into two. Its two heads fused into one. Its body changed into the shape of an old Japanese war soldier, covered in dark red and black armor.

Zian stared. "What the hell are you?"
"This is my real form," the monster said proudly.
"And I'll tell you my name. I am Akuma—the God of Evil Spirits."

"Oh? You call yourself a god?" Zian replied. "Then defeat me."

But Zian's overconfidence broke his defense. Akuma struck with a fierce punch to Zian's face—
And Zian collapsed instantly, unconscious on the ground.

Chapter 5

Zian Decision

Morning arrives. Zian's brother Kaito wakes up early and prepares breakfast for him—two apples and a glass of banana milk juice, Zian's favourite. He knocks on Zian's door.

"Zian, wake up, brother!"

The knocking wakes Zian. Half asleep, he opens the door, confused and unsure if everything from last night
—Akuma, the fight, the terrace—was real or just a dream.

Kaito smiles, "Come on, get ready. Today Miss Hana Sato's reports are coming. And you also have to say goodbye to your friends. They're leaving this evening." But behind Kaito, sitting calmly on a chair… Zian sees the black soldier-like monster again—Akuma.
Zian freezes. Am I imagining him? Or is he actually real?

He whispers, "Kaito… do you see someone there?"
"Where?" Kaito looks behind but sees nothing.
Akuma replies inside Zian's mind, "Don't worry. Humans like him cannot see me. And I have no intention to harm you or anyone."

Shocked, Zian asks mentally, “How are you talking to me?”

Akuma answers, “Last night, we made a deal. Our minds are now connected. We can communicate silently.”

Kaito leaves the room. Zian immediately questions, “What happened last night? Who are you? What is happening to me? How do you know about me?”

Akuma calmly says, “Relax, Zian. Right now, you are too confused. If I tell you everything at once, you will break. Let things unfold. I am your friend, and I will help you.” “How can I trust you?” Zian asks.

Akuma replies, “You were badly injured last night. I healed you. And from today, you are not alone. We are partners.”

For a moment, Zian even wonders if he is losing his mind.
He thinks of visiting a psychiatrist.

Akuma laughs softly, “You don’t need that. I am real. And with time, you will understand everything.”
Zian decides to get ready.

Akuma stays beside him—silent, invisible to everyone else.

Zian's mother gives him his medicine, and soon he leaves in the car with Kaito, heading to the police station.

Akuma suddenly says, "Zian, I need to investigate Miss Hana Sato's body." Zian is shocked. "You know her?"
"I know everything. By the end of today, you will understand why. But for now, do your duty. She was your mother in every way that matters."

Zian gets emotional. He is right, he thinks. Whatever the truth is… she was my mother.

At the police station, he sees Miss Hana Sato's body. Friends, family members, teachers, and classmates are all gathered—she was a respected principal.

Zian performs all funeral responsibilities like a true son. It is a heartbreaking moment.

Afterward, he meets Kai and Akari—they are leaving for Tokyo today. Hanae is also there. Kai whispers in Zian's ear, "Bro, after we leave… tell Hanae the truth. She loves you. Tell her what you told me in the meditation room."

Finally, after many chapters, the reader is about to know what Zian told Kai in the meditation room.
Zian says goodbye.

He turns to Hanae. "When is your train?"

“I’m not going today,” Hanae says softly. “I’ll go early morning tomorrow.” She adds, “Zian, I’m sorry for the other day. You were already confused about your life and I still confessed my feelings.”

“It’s okay,” Zian replies gently.

Meanwhile, Akari asks Kai, “What did you whisper to Zian? Something personal?”

Kai nods. “Yes. The truth is… Zian also loves Hanae. But he’s confused about his life. He feels it’s not the right time.” Akari is shocked. “Then why didn’t he tell us? Hanae cried the whole day!”

Kai sighs. “Zian is scared. You know what happened to him. You know his birthday curse story. The hidden universe. If anything happens to Hanae because of him, he won’t forgive himself.”

Akari whispers, “So… he is searching for the hidden universe? For the truth about his father? About everything?”

“Yes,” Kai says. “Zian is a real mastermind. He will handle everything. But he doesn’t want to drag Hanae into danger. He sees Miss Hana Sato in Hanae. That’s why he became angry at her that day—he feared the curse might harm her.”

Akari asks softly, “So… they can never be together?”

Kai smiles sadly. “Akari, you know him. Once Zian finds the truth—once he understands his purpose—maybe then he will think about love. But not now. He’s fighting a bigger battle.”

Akari says, “Should I tell all this to Hanae?”

Kai replies, “Maybe. But give it one day. Who knows… Zian might confess on his own.”

Akari nods. “Okay. Let’s see what happens.” Zian

asked Hanae, “Is everything okay?”
Hanae nodded but said, “Ask me directly. What happened to you?”

Before Zian could answer, Akuma appeared from behind and said, “Ohh, so this is the girl you have feelings for! What’s your plan, bro? I can see she has a pure heart and loves you a lot. Don’t let her go. Trust me—I even set your dad with your mom. I can set this girl with you too. Think about it once again!”

Zian shouted, “Can you please stop for some time and leave me alone?”

Hanae thought Zian was shouting at her. Hurt, she quietly whispered, “Sorry,” and walked home. Zian wanted to stop her but couldn’t say anything.

He turned to Akuma angrily. “What the hell are you doing? Do you even understand how important this is?”

Akuma calmly replied, “Don’t say anything. I am with you forever.”

Zian sighed. Let it be. Whatever happened… maybe it’s better this way. He went back home.

As soon as he entered, he saw a lawyer and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nakamura, waiting for him.
Zian asked, “What happened?”

His parents said, “Nothing serious. Your real mother, Miss Hana Sato, has sent something important for you.” Zian already knew what it was. His real mother had left all her property to him, and half of it to his younger brother, Kaito. Along with that, she had left three letters for different stages of his life.

Zian then asked his adoptive mother about the forensic report. She lied, “Everything is normal. It was just a heart attack.”

Zian felt something was off. In his mind, he whispered to Akuma, “Go and check the report. Something is wrong.” Akuma replied, “Okay,” and disappeared to investigate.

Zian sat confused on a chair. His father, Mr. Hiro, said gently, “As I expected, your mother also wanted you to live like a normal person. No need to get confused or think about the hidden universe. Focus on your career. Make her proud.”

Zian nodded. “Don’t worry, Dad. I have decided to stop thinking about the hidden universe. I want to focus on my career. I’m planning to go to Tokyo and start my own startup.”

His family became very happy with his decision. Akuma returned and asked, “You really want to do this?” Zian replied in his mind, “These people always took care of me and never treated me differently. How can I hurt them? I’ll do everything—but I will never let them know anything. It’s better for everyone.”

Akuma smirked. “Smart move, Zian.” Zian took the letters in his hand. “I need to read my mother’s letters. Leave me alone for some time.”

His parents smiled, finally seeing him focused on his future. Inside his room, Zian asked Akuma, “What did you find in the report?” Akuma answered, “It was not a normal heart attack. It was a planned murder—for that Key which is with you.”

Zian clenched his fist. “Tell me everything. Who are you? What is happening? What is the story of the hidden universe and this cursed mark? I want full explanation.”

Akuma replied, “I will answer every question. But first, we need to decide which problem to solve. I’m your buddy—guiding you is my responsibility.” “Fine,” Zian sighed. “But at least remove this warrior suit first.”

Akuma puffed his chest. “I am the King of Evil. This suit is my pride.” “You look like a joker in it,” Zian said. Akuma stared, then finally agreed. He changed his clothes—but Zian laughed as Akuma realized he couldn’t wear Zian’s clothes.

“Stupid! I’m an evil being. I can’t wear your clothes like that. You need to burn your clothes and take my name three times. Only then I can get them.”

Zian agreed and stepped outside to follow the ritual. After some time, Akuma finally appeared in a cool modern outfit—surprisingly stylish for an evil king.
Zian asked, “Now tell me the story.”

Akuma said, “First, read the letters your mother left.” Both returned to the room. In the letters, Miss Hana mostly wrote how much she missed him, how sorry she was, and how much she loved him.
Nothing unusual.

Akuma narrowed his eyes. “Your mother was a brilliant woman. She must have hidden a secret message.”
Zian spent the whole night trying to decode the letters but found nothing.

“Let’s bring that box from Hana’s house—the one with the password,” Zian said. Akuma laughed. “No need. I already brought it.”

“Good job,” Zian said.

That evening, Zian's adoptive mother, Miss Mina, called him for dinner. It was the day of Miss Hana's funeral, so everyone gave Zian extra attention. Zian thanked them sincerely.

Akuma mumbled, "Bro, bring some food for me too." Zian wondered, Why can only I see you? Why can't others?

Akuma replied in his mind, "We formed a bond last night. Only a true sorcerer can see or sense me."

Zian finished dinner. "Mom, I need to wake up early to say goodbye to Hanae."

His mother smiled, "Any plans to propose her?" "No,

Mom. She is just my friend."
His father chuckled, "We can see it in your eyes, dear.
You love her."

Zian changed the topic quickly and asked his mom to keep some food in his room since he had to work on a project. His parents were happy to see him acting like a normal student again.

Back in his room, Zian gave the food to Akuma and started searching on internet about the Key. It looked ancient structure of key.

Chapter 6

Whispers of the Magic Key

Akuma said, “I’m done with my food. What do we do next?”
Zian replied, “Good. Now wash your plates.” Akuma
frowned. “I am not your servant.”
Zian smirked. “You want my help, right? Then tell me about my mom and dad, the secret of the Hidden Universe, and the meaning of this curse mark.”
Akuma crossed his arms. “If I tell you everything, then you will wash my plates.” “No,” Zian said firmly. “You will wash them yourself.”
Grumbling, Akuma washed his plate and came back into the room.

Zian looked at him seriously. “Now tell me everything you know about me.” Akuma nodded. “Okay. But first, we need to find the secret code in your mother’s letters and open that box. Right now, that’s the most important thing.”

Zian suddenly noticed something strange.

“You are the King of Evil. Why can’t you open the box?”

Akuma replied, “Curses cannot unlock magical boxes like this. Only a human can. We can’t even see what’s inside.”

Zian frowned. “Then how did you bring this box here?” Akuma said, “Every curse needs a partner — a sorcerer. When a curse creates a bond with a human, we unlock more power. Before I bonded with you, I had only 10% of my power. You found the key and unlocked me. And it was my luck it happened on a full moon night, so I could fight you.”

Zian asked, “So during a full moon, a curse without a sorcerer is useless?”

“Yes,” Akuma said. “But I am the King of Evil. I’m different. I once served your father…”

Zian’s eyes widened.
“Oh… that means other curses cannot fight during a full moon night?”

Akuma nodded. “Correct.”
Zian began connecting the dots in his mind. “So… what is the truth of the Hidden Universe?”

Akuma sighed. “There is no ‘Hidden Universe’ like the stories say. That story was created to protect people. Curses like me need sorcerers to activate our full power. A thousand years ago, evil sorcerers increased. With powerful curses, they became unstoppable. Then some legendary warriors started hunting them.”

Akuma continued, “To stop future generations from becoming evil sorcerers, your ancestor — the Great Minho Hayashi — created the fake story of the Hidden Universe. He wanted the world to forget curses forever.” Zian asked quietly, “Then how did my grandparents die after learning the truth?”

“It was just an accident,” Akuma replied. “Your family connected it with the story.”

Slowly, Zian began to understand. Akuma looked at him proudly.

“One more thing. You are from the bloodline of Great Minho Hayashi.”

Zian felt shocked. “That means he is my great-grandfather?”

“Yes,” Akuma said. “I can sense the bloodline of my master.”

“Then my whole family… they are sorcerers?”

Akuma shook his head. “No. After Minho, no sorcerers continued the tradition. He created strict rules and tried to erase the knowledge so no one could misuse it again.”

“But some people found the truth,” Akuma continued, “and once again used curses for evil. At that time, your father stopped them. Now… it’s your responsibility.”

Zian took a deep breath. Most of the answers were finally coming together. Suddenly, he saw a message pop up on his laptop. A thought struck him.

“This key is a thousand years old…” Zian whispered. “What if the password is 1000?”

He typed 1000 into the box.
Click.

The box opened. Zian stared at it, confused. “Why did the box accept 1000 as the password?” Akuma smiled.

“Because Miss Hana Sato didn’t know the password. This box belonged to my first master, the Great Minho. His prediction was that after 1000 years, someone from his bloodline would save the world.”

Zian felt his heartbeat rise. Akuma added proudly, “Now I understand how you fought me for so long. After all… you are the descendant of the Legend of the Lost Warrior.”

Zian said, “Okay… let’s see what’s inside.” But before opening it, he asked,

“Why does the box look new? It looks like a modern design.”

Akuma grinned. “It’s a magical box. It changes its form with every generation.”

Zian finally opened it. Inside, he saw a book titled: “The Legend of the Lost Warrior.”

Zian asked Akuma, “Do you know what this book is about?”

Akuma nodded. “Yes. This book contains all the secrets of increasing curse energy and unlocking different curses for humans. That’s why many people want to capture it.”

He looked at Zian seriously. “You must protect it.”

Zian asked Akuma, “Do you know what this book is about?”

Akuma nodded. “Yes. This book contains all the secrets of increasing curse energy and unlocking different curses for humans. That’s why many people want to capture it.”

He looked at Zian seriously. “You must protect it.”

Zian then asked, “Why did you want to take that key from me in the first place?”

Akuma sighed. “We—The Five Evil Gods—are bound by five keys. When a person from the legendary bloodline touches the key, the curse energy inside gets released. If someone gathers all five keys, they become the most powerful being in the entire universe.

They can do anything… reshape the world itself. But there is one rule—the curse energy only releases for someone of the legendary bloodline. A normal person cannot open any curse."

Zian whispered, "So… if my bloodline is destroyed, then no curse can be released again?"

Akuma said, "Yes. But for the bad sorcerer's bloodline, capturing the keys is easy. If this curse opened because of you, it means someone else is already searching for the remaining curse energies. And I believe that sorcerer has already summoned one curse. He is nothing like you—he is dangerous."

Everything around Zian suddenly felt heavy. Even his mother didn't know these secrets. Only his father knew.

Zian asked, "Where is the key now?"

Akuma replied, "Zian, when you were injured by me, the key was with you. That is why I connected myself to you. The key is now you. It will only recreate itself when both of us are separated. Once the bond between a sorcerer and a curse is formed, the key resides inside the sorcerer's body. It acts like a clock—connecting both our energies. Because of you, my power gets activated. And because of me, you can control curse energy. Our bond means everything."

Zian took a deep breath. “Then… how did you meet my father? Where is he now? Is he alive? And why can my mother not accept me openly? And what was that strange energy I sensed at school and in Miss Hana Sato’s house—my real mother’s house? It wasn’t you, so who was it? What kind of curse was that?”

Akuma’s eyes narrowed. “When I was released from the key, I sensed a bad curse along with its sorcerer’s energy. But it was a full moon night, and because you had the key, that energy was afraid to attack. It knew that without any Sorcerer, I could destroy it completely. After all, I am the King of Evil. That is how I indirectly saved your life.”

“Tell me about my parents,” Zian demanded softly. “Especially my father.”

Akuma placed a hand on his shoulder. “Zian… it’s too late today. Sleep. No one will enter this house as long as I am here. And now that I have a sorcerer, my full energy will not allow any bad curse to get near us.”

Zian smiled lightly. “Thank you, Akuma… because of you, I finally know something about my life. I finally have a purpose.”

He soon fell asleep, exhausted but relieved—he had at least a few answers.

Akuma watched him silently. What truly happened to Zian’s mother? He didn’t know—he was sealed inside the key when everything occurred.

Determined, Akuma left the house to visit Miss Hana Sato's home. He wanted to sense what had happened to her… and why destiny had chosen Zian to reopen this dangerous universe.

Even Akuma was confused. According to him, Zian's father had destroyed everything and ensured no one would ever open the curses again.

But if destiny chose Zian… Something was terribly wrong.
And Akuma knew he must train Zian for all the dangers ahead.

Akuma knew that Zian was still just a kid, and he didn't want to reveal everything to him at once. He had to tell Zian the truth slowly, step by step, and guide him through every stage of life. Zian still didn't fully understand the curse powers inside him, and Akuma had to protect him until he did.
Suddenly, Akuma sensed that several dark curses were trying to enter Zian's house. The book's release had attracted them, pulling them toward Zian's energy. Realizing the danger, Akuma immediately returned to the house.
The moment he entered, every evil curse around the area disappeared instantly. The presence of the Evil God himself was enough to make them flee. No curse—good or bad—dared to come near Zian when Akuma was around.
After all, Akuma had unknowingly become Zian's silent guardian… His protector, His bodyguard.

Chapter 7

Zian and Hanae

It was a new day—bright, sunny, and full of fresh energy.

Zian woke up feeling stronger than ever. After a tough workout and a peaceful meditation session, he went to wake Akuma for breakfast.

He searched online about what curses usually liked to eat and found that most curses loved apples. So Zian brought a few apples for Akuma. Akuma was very happy to see them, but Zian insisted that he brush his teeth and get ready first.

Akuma complained that curses didn't need such things, but Zian reminded him, "You're my curse. Since I'm your sorcerer, you HAVE to get ready properly."

After breakfast, Zian said, "Today, we have to say goodbye to someone very close to me."

Akuma nodded. "I know. Hanae Minamoto. She's a nice girl. And I can feel strong feelings from your side."
Zian looked surprised. "You can read my mind?"

Akuma replied, “The stronger the bond between curse and sorcerer, the more our powers grow. Good sorcerers always have stronger bonds—that’s why they are more powerful than the bad ones.”

Then Akuma added, “Go meet Hanae. I’ll stay connected to you. But don’t go more than three kilometers away. Your power isn’t stable yet, so other curses may try to attack you. But don’t worry—I’m here.”

Zian asked, “Why aren’t you coming with me?”

Akuma said, “You have the book. Someone has to protect it.”

Zian smiled. “Fine. Enjoy your apples. I’ll be back soon.”

As Zian walked down the road, he spoke to Akuma through their mind-link. “What do you think? Should I propose to her?” Akuma replied, “She’s perfect for you. But if you fall in love, she becomes your weakness. In the future, curses may try to harm her. For her safety… keep your feelings hidden.”

Zian knew Akuma was right. So he decided he wouldn’t confess. When he reached Hanae’s house, it was locked. He thought he was early—her train was at 10 AM and one hour was still left. He asked a neighbor about the Minamoto family.

The neighbor said, “Mr. Minamoto and his daughter got jobs in the United States. They left last night.”

Zian felt his chest tighten. He immediately called Kai and Akari. They all tried to contact Hanae, but her phone was unreachable.

Zian never got the chance to confess his feelings.

Akuma said gently, “It’s better she left. It keeps her safe from all this.” Zian silently returned home.

Akuma then said, “We should leave too. Staying here might attract curses and trouble your family.”

But Zian refused.

“No. If I leave, how will I find who is behind all this? And what guarantee is there that curses won’t harm my family?”

Akuma agreed, “You’re right. But staying in this room with your parents’ energy around us isn’t good either.” Zian smiled slightly. “Don’t worry. I have a solution.”

Being an engineer, Zian had built a secret underground lab connected directly to his room. He opened the hidden passage, and both entered the lab.

Akuma looked around in surprise. “You’re not just physically strong. You’re intelligent too.” Zian replied, “It’s all because of Buddha’s teachings and meditation. They keep me focused.”

Akuma nodded. “Yes. Meditation keeps us calm, wise, and motivated.”

Chapter 8

Investigation of Curses

After seeing the underground lab, Akuma asked Zian, “When did you make this lab?”

Zian replied, “Actually, it took me three years to build this place. My parents don’t know that our house has a hidden storage area. The entrance starts from my room. When I discovered it, I started improving this place day by day.”

Akuma nodded. “It’s the 21st century, but your skills and knowledge really shock me. You understand technologies so well.”

Zian asked, “You know about technology?”

Akuma smiled. “Of course. I was with your dad. At that time, it was difficult for me, but I worked with him for many years. We defeated many dangerous curses and sorcerers. After our mission was almost finished, my work ended. Then I was sealed inside the key again. After that, your dad married your mom, and I don’t know what happened next.”

“So you have no idea what happened after their marriage?” Zian asked.

Akuma nodded. “Yes.”

“Then tell me the name. I want to know my father’s real name.”

Akuma said, “Not just the name—I can even show you their faces. I’m a curse. I never forget my master.”

Akuma focused his magical power. A large circle appeared in the secret lab, and inside it, Zian saw the image of his father and mother together.

“Your father’s name is Rayan Ardan,” Akuma said. “This is my father’s real name?” Zian asked, shocked.

“Yes,” Akuma replied. “Your father used your mother’s surname. Even when I asked him about your grandfather, he said he didn’t know anything. And he didn’t want to know. He only cared about loving his children unconditionally.”

Now Zian finally knew the truth about his parents and the story of curses—but he still needed to find his enemy.

“Give me my mom’s report,” Zian said.

Your paragraph textAkuma replied, “Let’s do it, partner. But before we start, I want to ask you something.”

“Why?” Zian asked.

“Why do you want to do this? For your parents? For yourself? Or for the world?”

Zian frowned. “Why are you asking me this now?”

Akuma said slowly, “Because the universe chose you as a warrior to fight curse energy for this generation. And you accepted it. I want to know why you chose this path.”

Zian took a deep breath. “My life was good. My career, my future—everything. If my real mom hadn’t had a heart attack, everything would be better. I just want to know how it happened. I want revenge.”

“So this is a revenge fight?” Akuma asked.

“Whatever you call it,” Zian said. “But yes—it’s revenge.” Akuma studied him closely. He was a smart, ancient curse. He knew everything, and before working with anyone, he always tested whether the person was worthy—whether they could handle the power.

“Okay,” Zian said. “If your questions are over, let’s start the work.”

Akuma nodded. “Sure.”

Zian asked, “If I was the wrong person, would you still stay with me?”

Akuma shook his head. “No. After summoning a curse, the curse has the right to choose whether they want to connect with the sorcerer or not. They have many ways to test. Some curses ask questions, some judge leadership. If the sorcerer doesn’t have the qualities of a leader, the curse can kill them.”

Zian asked, “Then what happens to the curse after killing the sorcerer?”

“Those curses become independent,” Akuma said. “They gain fifty percent of their sorcerer’s power. They usually hide and live in dark places where no one goes.”

“But you said curses are weak without a sorcerer,” Zian reminded him.

“That depends on the situation,” Akuma explained. “If a curse kills its own sorcerer, it absorbs half their power. Such curses can kill anyone.”

“So the curses attracted to this book… are they the ones who killed their sorcerers?” Zian asked.

“Yes,” Akuma replied.

“Then why did you choose me?”

Akuma smiled. “Because you fought me with equal strength even without knowing anything about me. Your bravery attracted me. Now that we’re connected, I will teach you new things with time.”

Zian asked, “What happens after this curse mission is over?”

Akuma said, “The key that connects us will appear in your hand again. And I will be sealed inside it once more.”

Zian asked, “What about the curses who killed their sorcerers? Where is their key?”

“That’s a very interesting question,” Akuma said. “Those curses keep their own keys with them. To kill them permanently, we must find their key. When we connect with that key, our power increases—and that curse is completely erased.”

“So these powerful curses want to connect with my key to gain more power?” Zian asked.

“You’re absolutely right,” Akuma said. “This is all a game of power.”

“And what if a curse connects with your key?” Zian asked.

“I will vanish,” Akuma said quietly. “And that curse will gain all my powers. The sorcerer connected to me will also lose their power. That is why this book is so important. It contains all types of curses, how to defeat them, how to summon them, how to control them. It was written by your great-grandparents.”

He looked at Zian.
“And now, in this century, the universe has chosen you as its warrior.”

Zian asked Akuma, “Let’s investigate the other curses that appeared to me before I met you.”

Akuma replied, “I searched for them, but I didn’t find proper information. It is definitely a curse with its sorcerer. It’s easy to track or destroy a curse without a sorcerer, but it becomes very hard to track a curse that is bonded with its sorcerer.”

“So the curse energy I felt at school that night… it was with its sorcerer?” Zian asked.

“Yes,” Akuma confirmed. “If it was a normal curse, I would have been able to track it easily.”

Zian asked, “Did you find anything missing in the report?”

Akuma shook his head. “No. The report clearly says it was just a heart attack.”

“Are you sure, Akuma?”
“Yes. There is nothing wrong in the report.”

But Zian still felt uneasy. Something wasn’t right.
“There is something missing,” Zian said. “We missed something during the investigation.”

Suddenly, Zian’s alarm started blinking.
“Come on, move fast! Get back to the room!” Zian said.

Before Akuma could ask anything, Zian rushed into his room and started typing rapidly on his laptop.
“What happened?” Akuma asked.

Just then, someone knocked on the door. It was Zian’s younger brother, Kaito.

Akuma already knew Zian had installed sensors around the house to sense who was entering—he kept everything secret and secured.

Kaito asked, “Do you want to come with us? My friends and I are going for a movie.”

Zian replied, “You go. I’m busy.”

Kaito sighed. “Stop focusing on unnecessary stuff. Focus on what you have and what you want to do.”

Then he added, “By the way, Hanae emailed me. She said she’s moving to the US forever. I think you need to talk to her. She changed everything—her social media accounts, her number, everything. From her old email, she sent me an important message because she knows you never check your mail.”

Zian asked, “Did you read the message?”

Kaito said, “No, big brother, I don’t read anyone’s private messages. But you’re not ‘anyone’ to me… so I read it. I forwarded it to your email. Check it when you have time.”

Kaito left the room.

Akuma smirked. “Your brother is smarter than you.” Zian sighed.

“I know him well.”

Akuma asked, “You really don’t want to read that message?”

Zian replied, “No. It’s not important in my life now. I want to stay focused. And it’s better for her not to be in contact with me. These curses may harm her.”

Akuma said, “No problem. I can protect her.”

“No way,” Zian said immediately. “I don’t want to risk her life. It’s better if we never meet again.”

Akuma suddenly understood—Zian had strong feelings for Hanae. But to protect her, he chose to let her go. A true leader's sacrifice.

The universe had indeed chosen him for a reason. Suddenly, Zian snappedhis fingers. "You said something just now…"

Akuma froze. Did Zian… read his mind?

But Zian hadn't learned mind reading yet. How was that possible?

"Did you say anything, Akuma?" Zian asked casually. Akuma replied softly, "No… nothing. But why?"

"Let's go back to the lab," Zian said. They returned to the underground lab.
Zian asked, "Tell me the time of my mom, Miss Hana Sato's death."

Akuma said, "Around 12:30 to 1:00 AM."
Zian's eyes widened. "That's the piece we missed. Akuma… it wasn't a heart attack. It was murder."

"How can you say that?" Akuma asked.

Zian explained, "At 3 AM, after coming home from school, I had a strange dream. I saw Miss Hana Sato. I entered her house. She spoke very harshly and told me to go away. I didn't feel any curse energy there. But in school, I did feel curse energy. That means… there must be two curse energies. Someone took her form."

Akuma nodded slowly. “You are right. Curse energy can take human form and talk. And if it was with its sorcerer, it would be hard to detect.”

Zian continued, “At school, I could sense curse energy. But in her house… and when that energy came into my house—I couldn’t sense anything.”

Akuma explained, “That’s because of your hidden power. When I fought you, I punched you many times but it didn’t affect you. When you had fear, your body became more active, your senses sharper, and your shield activated. But when you relaxed, the shield deactivated.”

“I don’t understand,” Zian said.

“If you see someone you trust—like Miss Hana Sato or your dad—you relax. Your shield drops. That’s why you couldn’t identify the curse disguised as them.”

“Now I understand everything,” Zian said. “So maybe there is one curse with its sorcerer who killed my mom… or maybe two or more sorcerers.”

Akuma nodded. “It’s hard to guess how many. But if they find the sorcerer, they’ll definitely know about this book and my key. They’ll want it to become more powerful. And they will come looking for us.”

“So they know who we are,” Zian said, “but we don’t know how many they are.”

“Yes,” Akuma said. “That’s why every step must be taken carefully and safely. It doesn’t mean we can’t defeat them. But before that, I must train you.”

“Yes,” Zian agreed. “This battle won’t be easy.”

Akuma said, “If I’m right, those sorcerers need this book. To get it, they must face us. They have already started killing curses without sorcerers to absorb their power.”

“So we also need to heal and grow our power,” Zian said. Akuma nodded. “Exactly.”

Chapter 9

The Fractured Choice

Again, Zian's alarm started beeping, signaling something. He rushed back to his room, but this time it was only his mom, Miss Mina, calling him for lunch.

"Come down, Zian, have your lunch," she said.
Zian replied, "Okay, Mom, I'll come in a few minutes."

After some time, Zian came for lunch. Only two people were at the table—his mother and him.

Zian asked, "Where's Dad? Today is Sunday."

Miss Mina said, "He's busy at a school meeting. And your younger brother went for an afternoon movie show. Now, I'm really sorry, Zian."

Zian looked confused. "Sorry? Why? What happened?" Miss Mina sighed. "Your dad forgot to take his tiffin. So you'll have to go to the school and give it to him."

Akuma whispered, "If you're busy with work, I'll just go watch a movie.

Zian replied in his mind, “You’re coming with me. Our school is on the way. You can check the place again and see if we missed any clue about the curse or its sorcerer. But what about the book? How will we keep it safe?”

Akuma said, “No problem. I’ll lock it inside my shield. No curse will be able to sense it.”

Zian nodded mentally. “Good.”

His mom noticed him staring blankly and thought he was still disturbed about Miss Hana Sato. She asked gently,

“What are you thinking, Zian? If you are busy, I’ll go give the tiffin.”

Zian quickly replied, “No, Mom. I was just thinking about my website. I’ll deliver the tiffin first.”

Akuma said, “I already shielded the book.” “Great,” Zian said, and left with the tiffin.

Zian reached the school. It was completely empty. Only the security guard stood there.

“Zian? It’s Sunday. Why did you come?” he asked. “My dad said he had a meeting,” Zian replied.

But Akuma sensed something wrong. “It’s a trap, Zian. The sorcerers are planning something big.”

Zian relaxed. “No, Akuma. My dad always lies about meetings when he wants to eat outside. Mom’s strict diet, remember?”

Akuma hesitated. “Hmm… yes, that is also possible.”

Zian turned back toward home. On the way, he met his father’s close friend.

“Good afternoon, Zian. Where are you coming from?” the man asked.

“From school. Dad said he had a meeting, but maybe he just wanted to eat his favorite lunch,” Zian said casually.

But the friend looked shocked.
“No, Zian. Not at all. We planned to go out today, but your dad refused. He said he would stay home and talk to you about your career. He didn’t go anywhere.”

Akuma’s voice tightened.
“Now this is serious. We need to find them immediately.”

Zian opened the location tracker app. His dad’s last location was at the open ground behind the school. After that, the signal disappeared.

Akuma said, “We must go home fast. Your mom is alone.” Both of them ran.

Zian searched everywhere. His mother was missing too. Her phone was left in the kitchen—untouched.

Zian said, “Check the house! I’ll check the hidden cameras.”

Akuma nodded. “I’ll search outside.”

Zian rushed to his room. Everything was scattered. Someone had searched the entire room but couldn’t find the secret door. The spy cameras weren’t touched.

He pushed the bookcase and entered the lab, checking every camera feed—but there was nothing.

Akuma spoke in his mind,
“Zian… I can’t sense anything. This is definitely something big.”

Akuma returned to the lab.
“I only found your mom’s shoe in the garden,” he said quietly.

Zian tried calling his brother. No response. He called his brother’s friends.
“There was no movie plan today. What are you talking about?” they said.

Zian felt a cold realization.
The enemies had planned everything. They were far ahead.

Akuma said, “If they kidnapped them, they will contact us. We may get a clue.”

Zian didn’t panic. Even in this moment, he stayed calm. Akuma was impressed.

Zian wasn’t losing focus. He was thinking. Strategizing But the questions were endless-
Was it one curse or multiple? Were they connected?
Did they know about the book? Or Akuma’s key?

Akuma asked, “What do we do now, Zian?” Zian replied in a steady, controlled voice, “Let them play their game. They will definitely send us a clue. Then, we will play ours.” Even Akuma was confused.

Zian was like a chess master—thinking ten steps ahead. Akuma still couldn’t fully understand him.
And now… all Zian could do was wait. Wait for the kidnapper’s message.

The Beginning of Chaos

A storm of confusion surrounds our hero. What will happen next? Does Zian already have a secret plan in his mind? Can he save his family, or have the curses taken them beyond his reach? Are these kidnappers a single curse—or several different ones working separately? And if they are many, are their sorcerers connected or acting alone? What do they truly want?

If they are all different curses led by different sorcerers, then Zian is far from ready for a battle of this scale. This crisis has arrived too suddenly, too violently. At this point, anything can happen. Even Akuma—the God of Evil Curses himself—feels shaken. In a thousand years of existence, he has never witnessed such unlimited and unpredictable possibilities.

How will Zian handle this situation? Can he outsmart enemies he cannot even see? The answers to these questions lie ahead in the story. To know what happens next, and to see whether our hero can rescue his family, you will have to wait for Season 2.

Hello Reader

If you want the next season soon, please comment on Amazon where you purchased this book, and ask for “The Legacy of the Lost Warrior — Season 2.”

Your response matters. Your comments will decide how quickly the journey continues.

This is my first book. I am not a professional writer, but I wanted to create a thrilling and crazy story that entertains you. If you found any part boring, I sincerely apologize. If you found it exciting, please share your feedback.

When we receive more than 200 reviews, I will release Season 2.

I am in my final year of engineering, so your support will motivate me to continue writing. If the audience response is strong, I will bring the next season with even more suspense and adventure.
Thank you for reading Season 1: The Legacy of the Lost Warrior.

Note: Please leave your review on Amazon for
“The Legacy of the Lost Warrior — Season 1 by Suvidya Sonawane.”

You can also share your thoughts on my social media pages:
Instagram: suvidya.r.sonawane
Facebook: suvidya.r.sonawane

These are not empty pages by mistake. They are meant for you, dear reader.

I am giving you these one pages to write your own thoughts—your feelings, your theories, your questions, or anything you wish to remember from this journey.

If you want, you can also share your thoughts on social media and connect with us.
Thank you for reading this book.

Before You Close This Book

1. J.K. Rowling – Harry Potter

J.K. Rowling was a single mother struggling financially when she wrote Harry Potter.

Multiple publishers rejected her manuscript.
She believed in her story even when no one else did. Today, Harry Potter is one of the most successful book series in history.

Her journey proves that imagination and persistence can change destiny.

2. George R. R. Martin – A Song of Ice and Fire

George R. R. Martin worked for years as a screenwriter before success.

His writing style was once considered "too complex." He continued writing anyway, trusting his vision.
Game of Thrones became a global phenomenon. Patience and depth turned his dream into a legacy.

3. J.R.R. Tolkien – The Lord of the Rings

J.R.R. Tolkien began creating Middle-earth during periods of deep personal hardship, including the trauma of war and years of academic pressure.

His work went through countless revisions and took decades to reach completion. Many publishers and critics believed that fantasy as a genre had little future and even less audience.

Despite this, Tolkien continued writing, refining his languages, histories, and cultures with extraordinary care. Today, The Lord of the Rings stands as a cornerstone of modern fantasy literature. His life reminds us that truly great worlds are built slowly by those who refuse to give up on their vision.

4. Stephen King – The Dark Tower

Stephen King's journey to success was filled with rejection and self-doubt. His early manuscripts were turned down repeatedly, to the point where he almost quit writing entirely.

Financial struggles and criticism pushed him close to abandoning his dreams. It was the encouragement of his wife that convinced him to keep going and believe in his talent.

Over time, King's dedication paid off, and he became one of the world's bestselling authors, with The Dark Tower standing as a testament to his imagination.

His story proves that belief, support, and resilience can turn repeated failure into extraordinary success.

5. C.S. Lewis – The Chronicles of Narnia

C.S. Lewis did not achieve fame at a young age and spent much of his early life facing personal loss, loneliness, and doubt.

He was criticized by scholars and writers who dismissed his ideas as too simple or childlike. Yet Lewis believed in the power of stories that carried truth, hope, and meaning beneath their surface.

When The Chronicles of Narnia was published, it resonated deeply with readers of all ages. Over time, Narnia became a timeless world cherished across generations. His journey shows that stories written from the heart can outlive criticism and endure forever.

6. Rick Riordan – Percy Jackson

Rick Riordan did not begin writing Percy Jackson with fame in mind. He first created the stories to entertain his son, who struggled with learning difficulties and loved tales of mythology.

When Riordan tried to publish the series, several publishers rejected it, doubting its appeal to young readers. Instead of giving up, Riordan believed in his audience and the importance of representation in stories.

Eventually, Percy Jackson & the Olympians became a worldwide hit and introduced a new generation to mythology. His success reminds us that some of the greatest stories begin with love and purpose at home.

7. Suzanne Collins – The Hunger Games

Suzanne Collins dared to explore dark themes such as survival, sacrifice, and power through her writing. Many believed that young readers would not connect with such serious and unsettling ideas.

Despite the doubts, Collins trusted her instincts and focused on creating strong characters and meaningful narratives.

When The Hunger Games was released, it quickly captured global attention and reshaped young-adult fiction.

The series became a massive success both in print and on screen. Her journey proves that bravery in storytelling can create powerful change and lasting impact.

8. Brandon Sanderson – The Cosmere

Before becoming a bestselling author, Brandon Sanderson wrote numerous novels that were never published. Rather than seeing rejection as failure, he treated each one as a lesson and continued improving his craft.

He remained disciplined, consistent, and ambitious, eventually creating the interconnected universe known as the Cosmere. His persistence caught the attention of readers and publishers alike. Today, Sanderson is one of the most respected names in modern fantasy literature. His story shows that consistent effort and patience can turn unseen work into an extraordinary legacy.

9. Paulo Coelho – The Alchemist

Paulo Coelho faced immense disappointment when The Alchemist sold very few copies upon its initial release.

The publisher eventually dropped the book, and many would have considered the journey over. Coelho, however, refused to abandon his belief in the message of his story.

He continued pursuing publication, trusting the path he had chosen. Over time, The Alchemist became one of the most widely read books in the world.

His journey teaches us that faith in one's dream can overcome even the quietest beginnings.

10. Agatha Christie – Hercule Poirot

Agatha Christie was once told that she had no talent for writing and that her stories would never succeed. Instead of being discouraged, she used criticism as motivation.

She continued writing detective fiction and introduced readers to unforgettable characters like Hercule Poirot. Her unique style transformed mystery fiction and captivated audiences worldwide.

Today, Christie is recognized as the best-selling novelist in history. Her success proves that belief in oneself is stronger than doubt and more powerful than rejection.

11. Leigh Bardugo – Grishaverse

Leigh Bardugo struggled for years with self-doubt and uncertainty before publishing her first novel. She left a stable career to take a risk on writing full-time, unsure whether anyone would read her work.

When Shadow and Bone was released, it slowly found its audience rather than becoming an instant success. Bardugo continued building her world carefully, focusing on character depth and emotional complexity. Over time, the Grishaverse grew into a bestselling series and a popular screen adaptation.

Her journey shows that courage and self-trust can turn a quiet beginning into a powerful literary universe.

12. Andrzej Sapkowski – The Witcher

Andrzej Sapkowski never planned to become an international fantasy author. He entered a short story competition primarily for fun, without expecting lasting recognition.

The Witcher stories, rooted in Slavic mythology and moral ambiguity, slowly gained popularity in Poland before spreading worldwide.

Years later, adaptations in games and television introduced his work to a global audience. Sapkowski's success came not from chasing trends, but from staying true to his cultural voice.

His story proves that originality can cross borders and create timeless impact.

13. Veronica Roth – Divergent

Veronica Roth wrote Divergent while still in college, balancing studies with her passion for storytelling. She questioned her ability and feared her story might never stand out in a competitive genre.

Despite her doubts, the novel resonated strongly with readers and quickly became a bestseller. The Divergent series went on to influence young-adult fiction and inspire film adaptations.

Roth's journey highlights how belief and discipline at an early stage can lead to extraordinary achievement.

A Note to the Reader

If you are reading this, you have reached the last page of this book, and for that alone, I am truly grateful. I hope Legacy of the Lost Worrier gave you something meaningful—a moment of reflection, an emotion, or a thought that stayed with you even after turning these pages.

Every reader sees a story differently, and I genuinely respect your honest opinion, whether you loved this series or found it challenged you. Your view matters.

If you feel a connection with this story and wish to share your thoughts, you are always welcome to reach out to me. You can find me on Instagram and Facebook at suvidya.r.sonawane

I try my best to stay active, and if possible, I will definitely reply to your message. Hearing from readers is one of the greatest motivations for a writer.

This message is written especially for the honest reader
—the one who reads until the very end. Thank you for giving your time, your curiosity, and your heart to this book. I have intentionally left a few blank pages ahead for you.

Use them to write anything you wish—what you discovered, what moved you, what you want to achieve this year, or what you truly desire from your future. Let this book not be an ending, but a pause where you listen to yourself.

I wish you courage, clarity, and strength on your journey ahead. Please do share your review on Instagram or Facebook—I will be waiting to read your thoughts.

With gratitude and love,
Suvidya.R.Sonawane

LEGACY OF THE
LOST WARRIOR
SEASON ONE
HORROR • THRILLER • DETECTIVE
THE STORY BEGINS WITH A CURSE.
AVAILABLE IN 150+ COUNTRIES
BUY YOUR COPY ON AMAZON